“I see a high volume of major and minor salivary gland malignancy with varied clinical presentations and at different disease stages. Salivary gland malignancy can be challenging to diagnose, and I enjoy searching for the microscopic nuances that can unmask a tumour type. My particular interest is piecing together the histological, immunohistochemical and cytogenetic findings to identify possible alternative adjuvant therapy arms for patients’ post-surgery.

I believe the UKSGCRWG is a great opportunity to work collaboratively to improve patient outcomes and quality of life. Very glad to be part of the team!”
